Customs officials prevent the smuggling of 300 kg of drug precursors

Officers from the Tyumen and Ural Operational Customs offices, together with the Federal Customs Service of Russia's Main Directorate for Combating Smuggling, have stopped the smuggling of nearly 300 kg of drug precursors.

The criminal scheme was uncovered during operational investigative activities conducted in cooperation with representatives of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Russia and the Russian National Guard.

Twelve barrels containing a powdered substance were brought across the border in a truck trailer and delivered to Moscow. The goods were then sent by a transport company to Tyumen, where they were received by a 52-year-old man. He buried the barrels in a forest and camouflaged them with spruce branches. He was caught in the act.

A criminal case has been opened under subparagraph "b" of Part 4 of Article 229.1 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation (smuggling of narcotic drugs on an especially large scale). The article provides for a maximum penalty of life imprisonment and a fine of up to 1 million rubles.

The investigation is ongoing. Steps are being taken to identify everyone involved in the crime.
